BIOGRAPHY

Courtney M. Ellis (1888-1964) was born in Woodbury, a small town in Butler County, Kentucky. At the age of ten he decided that he wanted to be a steamboatman and, by age twelve, he was serving as part-time watchman on a government boat in Woodbury. He held his first job as an ashhauler on the Bowling Green, Kentucky towboat Emma and learned the rivers by working as a deckhand, fireman, watchman, cook and apprentice engineer (or "striker" as it was known in those days), later becoming a licensed marine engineer. He worked on packets belonging to the Lee Line of Memphis, Tennessee, and the Eagle Packet Company and the Streckfus Steamers, Inc., of St. Louis, Missouri. He was also employed by the St. Louis railroad transfer boats.

His interest in river life seemed a natural one as his grandfather, Captain Alex Gulliver, was a master and pilot on the lower Ohio River and Green River. His uncle, Charles Gulliver, was head mate on the City of Louisville, City of Cincinnati, and on Green River packet boats, while his father was a clerk on Green River boats.

Following his riverboat days, Ellis was an inspector with the Travelers Insurance Company for thirty-five years, retiring a few years before his death. During his retirement, Ellis collected a large number of steamboat photographs and mementos about the steamboat era. He was a crew member of the Avalon during her days of commercial service on the Ohio, Mississippi, and Missouri rivers. The Avalon was later named the Belle of Louisville. On his last river trip, Ellis served as second engineer on the Belle of Louisville as she won her steamboat race with the Delta Queen at Louisville, Kentucky.

Ellis always considered the Green River area his home and called it "my native country and beloved river where I learned to swim, caught fish, rowed a yaul." As a young man he knew every mile of the Green, Barren, Nolin, and Rough Rivers and "navigated every foot of their navigable lengths." Calling himself a "self-appointed authority and historian" on these rivers, Ellis gathered data, pictures, and other historical information preparatory to writing a book about the Green River and her tributaries. He planned for the book to be chiefly composed of pictures, accompanied by his personal experiences. "With few exceptions, it is my belief that I have a picture of every steamboat that ever operated on the Green River," he stated.

THE COLLECTION

Most of this collection is comprised of photographs of steamboats and other river boats (including captains, crews, interiors, and wrecks), river towns, locks and dams of the Ohio and Mississippi River Valleys. An alphabetical index of these photographs appears at the end of this document (p. 12). Also included are a tape recording of the Delta Queen's calliope tunes, masters' licenses, newspaper clippings, navigational charts, informational material, and pamphlets of historical interest (see shelf list below).
